Ma maison "my house" at Honeysuckle Acres (Joshua 24:15 - "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.") is a massive four-column colonial home built in 1927. The house is reminiscent of an antebellum mansion. It is set on seven park-like acres and is complete with the original stables and the original carriage stone in front, as featured in The South Carolina Historical Society Historic Home Tour 2005.

Driving up the tree-lined road will remind you of "Gone With the Wind" stairs/lobby. In 2002, the Innkeepers, Harold and Patricia Frish, purchased and remodeled the home for use as a small Bed & Breakfast. The home is a stunning setting for teas and receptions, both inside and out. A forty-foot ballroom and an equally large arched entrance hall with winding staircase are ideal backgrounds for bridal pictures. The ballroom is brightened by eight windows adorned by antique cornices from the circa 1854 Lace House, the governor's mansion in Columbia.

Harold and Patricia have a passion for Europe and have chosen to style the home after the manner of a small European guesthouse or "pension" with all continental amenities. Furnishings are an eclectic mix of fine European and American antique and classical furniture. Honeysuckle Acres has two guest rooms available for lodging with the possibility of a third connected as a suite with a shared bath. Cable TV is available in the two main bedrooms. Turn down bed service, imported chocolates on your pillow, and imported waters are provided.

Weddings

For parties and receptions, the fully equipped kitchens are caterer friendly with five sinks, three refrigerators, four freezers, stainless steel and marble preparation counters, two microwaves, and a gourmet stove. There is a breakfast room with large granite counters and electrical service that can be used as a buffet area for parties. Linens, antique Limoges china, and antique silverware are available for use.

Meetings and Retreats

Abundant parking is available for the party in the paddock on our property, and there is ample space for tents to be set up on the rolling lawns if you choose to seat your party outdoors. We have folding chairs, tents, and tables available for your use. The gazebo is electrified and may also be used.
